FOR THE TEACHER.

UPON every page of this book, a complete set of script capitals, small letters and figures have been conveniently arranged for model copies and for reference.

The association of these beautiful forms with each spelling exercise, should lead to rapid improvement in the writing of the pupils, and impart new interest to the study and spelling of words.

If, in the use of this spelling blank, the teacher will prepare lists of proper names and other words which should each begin with a capital letter, and mixed lists of words, only part of which properly so begin, and alternate these lists occasionally with the regular spelling lesson, the proper use of capital letters in words may be easily taught, and the needed practice upon any one or all of them given in support of the writing books, and the instructions imparted in their use.

Lessons either of twenty or twenty-five words may be given. If the teacher should wish to give but twenty words to each spelling lesson, the pupils in writing the words will only fill the blank spaces between the head of the column and the first horizontal red line. If twenty-five words, they will fill all the blank spaces for spelling in the column.

Method of Conducting the Spelling

—Exercises.—

When all the words of the lesson have been distinctly pronounced by the teacher, and as pronounced written in the blank spaces by the pupils, attention should be called, and the words of the lesson in their regular order spelled aloud by the teacher.

If the teacher should not announce a capital letter before spelling any one of the words in the lesson, the pupils will understand that it is not proper to use one in writing the word, and if one has been used, the error check for the improper use of capital letters, —, should mark the word.

If the teacher before spelling the word should announce a capital letter, and any pupil should have written the word without using one, the error check for its omission, /, should mark the word.

If a pupil should have misspelled any word of the lesson, the error check for incorrect spelling, √, should mark the word.

A Review of the Entire Lesson.

Whilst the teacher is announcing a capital letter, when proper to use one, and spelling each word of the lesson, the pupils should be required to fix their attention upon the written word in the spelling blank, and promptly mark the error when revealed, by placing the error check corresponding to the error, against the vertical column line directly to the left of the word in which the error is found.

In this immediate and valuable review of the whole lesson, pupils should not be required to exchange books, for the errors each should mark and learn permanently to avoid, are the ones they make, and not those made by some other pupil in the class. And when each has learned to write correctly all the words of the lesson, all the words will be found correctly written in each book.

A Review of the Mis-spelled Words.

When twenty words are given each lesson throughout the book, the pupils, after placing the error checks, may be immediately required to re-write correctly within the blank spaces of the unfinished column, the words in which the errors have been found. Or, the errors of the first and second columns of each page, after marking, may be reserved for a special lesson, and re-written correctly by the pupils within the blank spaces of the unfinished columns of the page.

When twenty-five words are given each lesson, as before stated, in writing them pupils will use all the blank spaces for words in the entire column.—And the immediate review in which pupils are required to mark the failures in the lesson with the error check, should be conducted in all respects as if only twenty words had been taken.

A Review of the Mis-spelled Words.

When the error checks have been placed by the pupils, each should be required to write correctly upon slips of paper distributed for that purpose, all the words in which errors have been found.

These slips should be collected in the usual way, and from them lists of words prepared by the teacher for special review lessons.

Special Exercises in Writing Columns

♦♦of Figures.♦♦

By requiring the pupils to number the words in the narrow columns to the left of the blanks arranged for the spelling exercises, neatness and skill in writing figures may be taught.

In twenty word lessons, pupils should write each No. in its regular order, beginning at the head of the column with 1, and ending at the first horizontal red line with 20. And when re-writing the words of the lesson which have been marked by the error checks, in the remaining blank spaces for spelling, the No. corresponding to each of these words, should be written in the unfinished column for Nos.

In twenty-five word lessons, the Nos. beginning with 1, and ending with 25, should fill all the blank spaces for word Nos. in the entire column.

If these exercises in writing figures should encroach too much upon the time for spelling, they may be given as separate lessons, or entirely omitted.

♦♦Correct Position.♦♦

In all the exercises in writing words and numbers, the position of the pupils and spelling blanks, should be the same as required during the regular writing lesson.
